

ABSTRACT

An apparatus for data transfer comprising a first network, a second network, and a plurality of nodes on said first network wherein secured data is transferred between at least two nodes of said plurality of nodes on said first network only if said at least two nodes also exist on said second network.